

Vanessa Oliveira

Musician, Actress, Performer

Fundação das Artes de São Caetano do Sul, São Paulo, Brazil - Portuguese, English, Spanish, French, Latin.

VANESSA OLIVEIRA (São Paulo, 1978) is a Brazilian musician, actress and interpreter who works with literature and the arts. She plays percussion and became an upstanding tambourine player inspired by Marcos Suzano. In São Paulo she studied drums and percussion with Alexandre Biondi (Banda Sinfônica) at Fundação das Artes, drums with Bob Wyatt (Soundscape Big Band) at Faculdade Cantareira, and acting with João das Neves. She has a degree of Electronics.

As a multilingual artist she investigates idioms, history of music and anthropology; she fluently speaks and sings in Portuguese, Spanish, English and French. She performed in films and TV series in Argentina and Spain. In São Paulo she was a member of renowned theatre companies: Os Satyros (directed by Rodolfo Garcia Vasquez & Ivam Cabral), and Teatro Oficina (Zé Celso Martinez Correa). Both groups form the core of Brazilian avant-garde scenery in performing arts. She was directed by awarded film directors Garth Davis (Emmy, Cannes) and Matthew Rolston (David Bowie, Michael Jackson).

Oliveira is married with Argentinean architect entrepreneur Patricio Pouchulu, collaborating in interdisciplinary researches; they explore Black African culture, promoting Negritude -Black Consciousness- through educational works, literature and arts from Afro-descendant.
